PLUMES.Blaine Went up Like a Rocket and Came Down Like a Stick.The Vote Will Stand 219 for Cleveland. 182 for Blaine.Since our issue of Friday nothing has occurred to change the result of the election. California and Michigan went for Blaine by a close vote but the solid South, New Jersey, Connecticut, Indiana, and New York are still on the side of Reform and Cleveland has 219 votes in the Electoral College. New York is very close but the Associated Press, the United Press, and all of the New York papers both Democratic and Republican with a few exceptions concede the State to Cleveland by a plurality variously estimated at from 1200 to 2000. The official count today will settle the matter definitely and the Republican committee announces that it will acquiesce in the will of the majority when the official figures are given. Indiana honors herself by giving a majority of nearly 8,000. In New Jersey and Connecticut the majorities are small but will do.The Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette was one of the last Republican papers to accept the inevitable. After its issue of Friday, which claimed Blaine's election, had been issued, it put out the following bulletin:"Get out and attend to your business. No favoritism shown here! Western Union wires bring messages of the same import to the Lincoln Club and Commercial Gazette. All hall Cleveland, the next President! The Democrats gain in New York over 20,000; in Illinois, over 20,000; in Iowa, over 30,000; in Indiana, over 14,000; in Kansas, nearly 12,000; in Massachusetts, almost 30,000; in Michigan, over 50,000; in Minnesota, over 5,000, and in Wisconsin, about 20,000."Jay Gould, Blaine's right hand man at the late "Belshazzar's feast" sent the following dispatch to the President elect, Friday:"I heartily congratulate you on your election. All sides concur that your administration as Governor has been wise and conservative, and in the larger field as President I feel confident you will do still better, and the vast business interests of the country will be entirely safe in your hands.

(Signed) JAS. GOULD.

The vote of New York state will be officially counted and certified to by the county officers to-day. On the 19th the State Board of Canvass will examine and verify the figures and declare the result. The Board is composed of five state officials, of whom Secretary of State Carr is the only Republican. He has made the following statement:

"There is no chance of stealing this state—not as long as I have charge of the affair. I don't propose that anybody shall steal the State. If Mr.
Cleveland has a plurality, large or small, he will get it. The same is true of the other candidate. I don't propose to play any Southern game. No matter whether it is friend or foe with me he has to have his justice."

PLAIN WORDS.

"I believe I have been elected President, and nothing but the grossest fraud can keep me out of it, and that we will not permit."

GROVER CLEVELAND.

"Boys, we have got them this time, dead sure. They may kick and squeal as much as they like but I have seen the official vote of each county in the State of New York and I tell you Cleveland and Hendricks have a majority over Blaine and Logan."—O. O. S., N. Y.—Special 7th in C. J.

THE ELECTION NEWS.

How It Was Received Here.

Although the news of Cleveland's election was received Thursday night the Republicans refused to concede it until Friday. They were misled by the deceptive and unreliable bulletins of the Associated Press, and it was not until Friday night that the Republican association would confess Blaine's defeat. In the meanwhile the Democrats had received private dispatches Thursday and knew that their candidates were elected. Thursday evening a prominent Republican in a crowd bantered a Democrat for a bet of $25 to $15 that Blaine was elected, and his bet was covered before he could say Jack Robinson. A colored politician created great enthusiasm among the darkies by putting himself on the outside of some "inspiration" and parading the street offering to bet $1,000 on Blaine.
If he had any such intentions he specially changed them before morning.
On Friday a telegram was received from Mr. Walter Evans conceding Cleveland's election, and then all was gloom in the Republican camp. The faces of the faithful were so long that the barbers were compelled to charge them two prices for shaving. You couldn't find a man who would bet a nickel to ten dollars, though a few still pretended to believe that the official count would give Blaine a plurality in New York. Poor fellows!
By Friday afternoon even the Associated Press bulletins conceded Cleveland a majority of 1460, and then the Democrats took the town. You couldn't find a Republican with a fine-tooth comb. They went into their holes and pulled the holes in after them. The exultant Democrats smoked them out and then all hands began to get drunk. The Republicans drank to drown despair, and the Democrats because they were so happy they couldn't help it. A crowd of Democrats assembled at the Phenix Hotel and held a public reception with Josh Wright as President Cleveland. They took Josh to a barber shop, fixed him up, bought him a Cleveland hat, pinned a badge on him and the fun began. One by one the passers-by were caught and ushered into the august presence of the new President and formally presented. The reception was boisterously continued for hours, and men who declined to go were dragged from their horses or buggies and taken in by main force amidst shouts of applause and cheers for Cleveland. At night a crowd assembled and painted the town red. For several hours yells, cheers and all kinds of noises made a fearful din that was heard for a mile or more in the country. All day Saturday the rejoicing continued, but the boys began to sober up and quiet down, and by night the city had returned to its normal condition of quietude. All the Republicans who had refused to believe the news of Friday were forced to do so Saturday by private messages, the papers, bulletins, etc., and they began to accept the inevitable with becoming grace. The Chairman of the Republican County Committee received a dispatch which read: "Everything for Cleveland except China, and China not yet heard from." In the face of Saturday's news none dared to hope, excepting a few who were foolish enough to believe that the counting out racket could be worked again. When they learned that the counting would have to be done by four Democrats and one Republican all hoped, and they were forced to realize that their defeat was a certainty. The colored people, as a general thing, took the result very quietly and despondently. Some of the more ignorant are foolish enough to believe that they are to be returned to slavery. When they realize that this is in no wise contemplated or desired they will not be alarmed or disturbed by the prospect of a change.
A few colored men in the city voted for Cleveland, and we believe that many of them will vote the Democratic ticket when they come to understand that Democrats are their friends. They have been electing Republicans and being themselves denied office so long in this county that a revolt has been with difficulty prevented for two or three years.

Our prediction is that many of the more intelligent colored men will hereafter vote the Democratic ticket and that the local Democratic gain this year will be very much emphasized and increased at the next election.

SOCIALITIES.

Father time is the correct standard for this latitude, at M. D. Kelly's.

Mr. H. B. Wilkinson, of Cadiz, was in the city Saturday.

Miss Emma Cooper, of Lafayette, is visiting Mrs. T. R. Hancock.

Mr. Wm. Cornelia, a little daughter, is quite sick with diphtheria.

Mrs. T. W. Buckner, of Henderson, is visiting Mr. S. G. Buckner's family.

Mrs. J. J. Chappell, of Cadiz, was in the city Saturday visiting her parents.

Mrs. M. L. Hopson spent last week with friends in Hopkinsville. While there her little grandson, son of Mr. Ed Hopson, fell down and broke one of his legs. He is doing well now and will soon be up.—Princeton Banner.

Mr. W. J. Mims, of the Atlanta Constitution, who has been on a visit to Mr. H. B. Garner, left Saturday for Louisville. He is a very agreeable young gentleman and made a number of friends by his engaging manners while in the city.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

Right on the heels of Cleveland's election comes the President's thanksgiving proclamation. Democrats can give thanks from the depths of their hearts for the glorious victory they have won. Following is the proclamation:

"The season is nigh when it is the yearly wont of the people to observe a day appointed for that purpose by the President, as an especial occasion for thanksgiving unto God.

Now, therefore, in recognition of this hallowed custom, I, Chester A. Arthur, President of the United States, do hereby designate as such day of general thanksgiving Thursday, the 27th day of the present month, November, and do recommend that throughout the land the people, ceasing from their accustomed occupations, do then keep holiday at their several homes and their several places of worship, and with heart and voice, pay reverent acknowledgment to the giver of all good for the countless blessings wherewith he has visited this nation. In witness thereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the city of Washington on this seventh day of November, 1884, and the Independence of the United States, the one hundred and ninth."

CHESTER A. ARTHUR.

The "Band of Harvesters" gave an oyster supper in Howe's Hall Friday night. About $40 was taken in.

Gish & Garner received yesterday from a prominent firm in San Francisco an order for a shipment of their wild Goose Liniment. Merit will tell.

An Evansville drummer who brought $300 over here to bet on Blaine had no difficulty in finding "suckers" and had to borrow money to get out of town.

Lizzie May Ulmer, will be the next attraction at the Opera House. She will appear Nov. 20, in her great success, "Dad's Girl." This company carry a car load of special scenery.

The new pike on South Clay street has been covered with dirt from the excavations made in the extension of the street beyond Maple. This "supplies a long-felt want" and makes the street nice and smooth for driving.

Happy Cal Wagner's Minstrels were the attraction at the Opera House Friday night. The performance was very good but a part of it was the same given last season. A pretty fair house greeted "Happy Cal," who is a favorite here.

Bishop Dudley preached the delectatory sermon in the new Episcopal church last Sunday. A very large congregation was present. The new church is very handsomely finished and is commodious and well arranged.

An alarm of fire was given Friday night. It turned out to be a slight blaze at a cabin in the rear of Mr. H. C. Gant's, caused by a quilt's catching on fire. No harm was done.

A second alarm of fire was given Sunday night about 9 o'clock. The janitor of the colored Methodist church was putting out the lamps when one of them exploded. The fire was extinguished before it gained any headway.

Capt. Al. Clark, the genial Internal Revenue Inspector for Kentucky and Tennessee was in Harrodsburg yesterday. The Captain tells a good story about the political excitement now rife. He says that while on a train in the Knoxville Branch railroad Wednesday, a party in front of him jubilantly exclaimed to his companion, "We've got you now." His companion, evidently Republican, replied, "Have you Democrats got all you want? You generally want the whole earth." "Yes," replied the first speaker, "we've got all we want; we've got the whole earth, but we will give you Republicans 1-1 if you want it."—Harrodsburg Democrat.

A man named Shannon went to Mr. E. M. Flack's Sunday morning and attempted to break in at the door. Mr. Flack went to the door and ordered him away, but he seemed to be crazy or drunk and pushed his way in and tried to draw a pistol. Mr. Wm. Cowan went across the street to Mr. Flack's assistance and they succeeded in ejecting the intruder after knocking him down. The man then went to Miss Bettie Garnett's next door, and tried to get in. The police were sent for but declined to interfere and Messrs. Flack and Cowan arrested him and took him to the European Hotel where his wounds were attended to. He was pretty badly hurt in the scuffle. He offers no explanation of his strange conduct.

At 9 o'clock the Institute met pursuant to adjournment.

An essay on "Organization and Discipline" delivered by D. W. Pettus. An essay on "Teaching" by Miss Nora L. Moorman; and by G. Baily on "Laws of Health;" and an essay on "The teacher's relation to his profession," by Mrs. Morgan, were delivered. "Geography, best method of teaching" was given by R. N. Lander. An essay by E. W. Benton on "The Intellectual and Moral qualifications of teachers" was delivered.

Besides these discussions there were a number of persons present who made very interesting remarks respecting the educational promotion of colored people and the utility of holding a Teacher's Institute. Late in the evening of the last day's session, County Superintendent G. A. Champlin arrived who stated his regret that circumstance prevented his meeting the Institute till so late an hour. He expressed his sympathy for the interest of the colored people and urged the necessity of teachers' morality.

On motion of E. W. Glass, a committee of three was appointed to consider the expediency of calling the Teacher's Association to meet the first Monday in December. The Institute now adjourned to meet sine die.

Colored Institute.

(Reported for SOUTH KENTUCKIAN by E. W. Benton.)

Pursuant to a call of the County Superintendent, the Colored Teachers' Institute, of Christian County, convened in Hopkinsville, Ky., Nov. 6th, 1884. "PATIENCE" POETRY.

I'm a take-up-the-eights young man, A do-the-things-brown young man, A terrible masher and regular crusher, Dead-head-at-the-shows young man.

I'm a brown-stone-foul young man, A narrow-necked young man, A water-for-cash, but still living on hash, Six-dollar-a-week young man.

I'm an only-daughter young girl, A spit-curls-and-frizzes young girl, A languishing, dainty, all-powder-and-painty Sit-up-till-evening young girl.

I'm a would-be-aesthetic young girl, A tote-on-the-arts young girl,
A post-in-embryo, don't-know-a-thing-you-know, All-on-the-surface young girl.

I'm a novel-reading young girl, A Ne-awake-till-threys young girl, A romanza, half-crazy, but terribly lazy, Let-me-do-the-work young girl.

LOCUST LEAVES.

The mellow moonlight never fell with more witching power over the Alhambra than falls the sooths of the sunlight this delightful Sabbath morning over the quiet little homes on Hackley street. The orange and citron tree, tipped with silver, never looked more beautiful than our little locust tree now looks, tipped with gold. The morning-glories that sweep around our doors are all in full conversation with the breezes that wander close and kiss them. We understand their smiles and nods, but, out of respect to the morning-glories, we attempt no translation of them, for earth has no language with which we can accurately paint the dress of the flowers. A spray of three large purple blossoms has peeped in at us through a window that has not been closed for many days; they speak to us in the same sweet language that did their sister in our childhood days, and, for a moment, return our childhood's faith in a flower-surrounded, flower-crowned, music-filled heaven. Delightful, indeed, though Eden must have been, we cannot imagine it superior to the great, wide, unfenced, deep old woodland through which we went not gathering the other day. There rested such a holy calm, such a pure, sweet peace over the whole scene that a serpent would not have dared to lift its head. The sky was soft and blue, and seemed to rest upon the gold of the tree-tops. The music of the falling nupt and whispering leaves was full of suggestions of the beautiful that the heart can better understand than the tongue express. One little pond or lake in the depth of this old wilderness is a vision of beauty in itself. It is round as a rose and lined with mosses of every kind, and fringed here and there with groups of fern and maiden hair that seem nodding and peeping and laughing in ecstasy at the sight of their own beautiful forms reflected in the sparkling water beneath. Moss-covered logs lie here and there all through it, forming tiny green islands in that lone little sea. From the joyous bird-songs that rose out of it and echoed around it we named it the "Bird's Paradise." If you should ever go nutting in that wild old wood, do not fail to find and feast your soul upon the transcendent beauty of that tropic-like bit of lake.

THE DISCOVERER OF GRANT.

A striking feature of Mr. Forney's career in politics and journalism was his discovery of Gen. Grant as Presidential candidate. The suggestion was first made by Mr. Forney in the fall of 1867, just after his return from Europe, where he had been to visit the Paris Exposition of that year, to Chief Justice Carter, of the District of Colorado, and Senator Thayer, of Nebraska. After digesting the idea for a day or two it impressed Mr. Forney favorably, and—but he can tell the story in his own words: "I retired to my rooms on Capitol Hill and prepared the five-column article which appeared in the Washington Chronicle and the Philadelphia Press of Nov. 7, 1867. After it was in type Senator Thayer and myself called upon John A. Rawlins, Chief of Gen. Grant's staff, and read it to him. He instantly advised that it should appear the very next day; but I answered that Gen. Grant was not a candidate for President, and did not desire to be, and, if I printed it without authority, there was little doubt that some superservable politician would call upon him and ask him if he had been made a candidate with his sanction. He will, of course, reply that he never saw the article until it was in print, and so all your schemes to make him President gang agley. Then Rawlins took it to Gen. Grant, and said a long time. When he returned he said, 'Gen. Grant is quite pleased with your statement of his political record, and surprised that he proves to be so good a Republican.' Of course Grant was predestined to be President of the United States, but there can be but little doubt that John W. Forney was one of the most potent instruments in the hands of the fate that shaped the civil career of the great Captain.—Philadelphia Press.

CHANGES OF A CENTURY.

The nineteenth century has witnessed many and very great discoveries and changes:

In 1809 Fulton took out his first patent for the invention of a steamboat.

The first steamships which made regular trips across the Atlantic ocean were the Sirius and Great Western in 1830.

The first public application to practical use of gas for illumination was made in 1802.

In 1813 the streets of London were for the first time lighted with gas.

In 1813 there was built in Waltham, Mass., a mill, believed to have been the first in the world, which combined all the requirements for making finished cloth from the raw cotton.

In 1819 there were only twenty-five post offices in the whole country, and up to 1837 the rate of postage was 25 cents for a letter sent over 400 miles.

In 1807 wooden clocks began to be made by machinery. This ushered in the era of cheap clocks.

About the year 1833 the first railroad of any considerable length in the United States was constructed.

In 1840 the first experiments in photography were made by Daguerre.

About 1840 the first express business was established.

The anthracite coal business may be said to have begun in 1820.

In 1836 the patent for the invention of matches was granted.

Steel pens were introduced for use in 1803.

The first successful trial of a reaper took place in 1833.

In 1846 Elias Howe obtained a patent for his sewing machine.

The first successful method of making vulcanized India rubber was patented in 1839.

AFTER THE VICTORY.

Gen. Badeau, in his "Life of Gen. Grant," speaking of the interview between Lee and Grant, the day after the surrender, says:

"The conversation was protracted, and the restless Sheridan, not used to waiting, at last rode up and asked permission to cross the lines and visit some of his old comrades in the rebel army.

Leave, of course, was given, and with him went Gen. Ingalls and Seth Williams, both men of the old army, with as many personal friends among the rebel soldiers as under the national flag. They soon found acquaintances, and, when the interview between Grant and Lee was over, the three returned, bringing with them nearly every officer of high rank in the rebel army to pay their respects to Grant and to thank him for the terms he had accorded them the day before.

Lee had good bad morning and returned to his own headquarters, while the national chief and those with him repaired to a farm-house hard by, where the capital had been signed.

He was also, came Longstreet, Gordon, Heth, Wilcox, Pickett and other rebel officers of fame, splendid soldiers, who had given their enemies much trouble; and Sheridan, Ord, Griffin and the men on Grant's staff met cordially.

First, of course, the rebels were presented to Grant, who greeted them with kindness. Most of them he knew personally. Longstreet had been at his wedding; Cadmus Wilcox was his groomsman; Heth was a subaltern with him in the Mexican war. Others he had served with in garrison or on the Pacific coast. They all expressed their appreciation of his magnanimity. To be allowed not only their lives and liberty, but their swords, had touched them deeply. One said to him in my hearing, "General, we have come to congratulate you on having won us up." "I hope, replied Grant, "it will be for the good of us all." Then the other national officers took their turn, shaking hands cordially with men whom they had met in many a battle or with whom they had earlier shared tent or blanket on the Indian trail or Mexican frontier; with classmates of West Point and sworn friends of boyhood. Some shed tears as they hugged each other after years of separation and strife. Countrymen all they felt themselves now, and not a few of the rebels declared that they were glad the war ended in the triumph of the nation."

A VALUABLE SECRET.

It is related of Franklin that, from the window of his office in Philadelphia he noticed a mechanic, among a number of others, at work on a house which was being erected close by, who always appeared to be in a merry humor, and who had a kind and cheerful smile for every one he met. Let the day be ever so cold, gloomy or sunless, the happy smile danced like a sunbeam on his cheerful countenance. Meeting him one day, Franklin requested to know the secret of his constant happy flow of spirits.

"It's no secret, doctor," the man replied. "I've got one of the best of wives, and when I go to work she always gives me a kind word of encouragement and a blessing with her parting kiss; and when I go home she is sure to meet me with a smile and a kiss of welcome; and then tea is sure to be ready; and, as we chat in the evening, I find she has been doing so many little things through the day to please me that I cannot find it in my heart to speak an unkind word or give an unkind look to anybody."

And Franklin adds:

"What an influence, then, hath woman over the heart of man, to soften it, and make it the fountain of cheerful and pure emotions. Speak gently, then; a happy smile and a kind word of greeting after the toils of the day are over cost nothing, and go far toward making home happy and peaceful."

Our retort courteous: He (after proposing and being rejected)—"I suppose in the end you will be marrying some idiot of a fellow?" She (breaking in)—"Excuse me, if I meant to do that I should have accepted your offer."

The broad inserted bands of lace still continue to be worn in kid as well as in silk gloves. Very elegant ones have a rich heading extending from the middle, close to the fingers, up to the very edge of the length. An odd extreme of lace is shown in a glove into which an applique of lace holds four tiny bits of gold-colored silk wrought to imitate gold coins. The glove has an edge above the hem wrought in gold thread, and is finished by a gold and white tassel. These are ivory white and intended only for evening wear. Cabriole red, curtain red and scarlet have appeared in lamp-trimmed kids for fall wear, as also a muns yellow, called old gold; this latter has the advantage of harmonizing with almost any costume and does not sit easily. Dark grape, dark wine, bronze-green and a shade resembling brass-color are among the new ones. A very elegant applique of lace appears upon the wrist of a novel glove produced by a well-known maker.
